In Step Six, I look in the mirror and recognize the defects that plague my recovery. I can for once see the harm that they cause in having healthy and meaningful relationships. I can see how I hold on to resentments and display misdirected anger. I can see how my selfish and self-centered ways stunt my development. For once, I recognize my faults and become willing to have the God of my understanding remove them.

No matter the level of comfort that they have provided me, I now become willing to do my part to stop acting out in my defects. But what I must remember, as much as I tread upon my new found willingness, is that I am human. I will fall short. I will stray from the course. And because of this, I must not beat myself up too bad. If I condemn myself for falling shy of "the mark," I could easily embark upon my old behavior of self-hate and reproof, thus straying from this spiritual path. For an addict like me, failure is familiar; it breeds the old adage of the addict, "Fuck it!"

I must also be open to constructive criticism from others. My sponsor, my network, and other close members are able to see what I cannot regarding my mood and behavior. As the saying goes, "you can't see the picture when you're in the frame."

The spiritual principle of humility must be embraced in Step Seven. The realization that I, of myself, do not have the power to remove my defects. Only God holds all authority. I will fall short but I must remain diligent. I must also exercise humility in the face of criticism for it is the observance of others that can be a true indicator of who I am.

TRADITION Seven

"Every NA group ought to be fully self-supporting, declining outside contributions."

The Seventh Tradition adds further clarity to our group's public relations. Tradition Six cautioned us against funding other organizations, lest problems of money, property, or prestige divert us from our primary purpose. Tradition Seven encourages us to decline funding from other organizations for the same reason: to maintain our group's focus on its primary purpose. By paying our own expenses, we remain free to carry our own message

Seventh Concept

All members of a service body bear substantial responsibility for that body's decisions and should be allowed to fully participate in its decision making processes.

All members of a service body bear substantial responsibility for that body's decisions; therefore, all of them should be allowed to fully participate in its decision-making processes. NA service is a team effort. The full participation of each member of the team is of great value as we seek to express the collective conscience of the whole.
